

NEW BOOKS.

"Men and Memories of San Francisco in the Spring of '50." By T. A. Barry and B. A. Patten. San Francisco; A. L. Bancroft & Co. 1873.

This is a book made up of the odds and ends and frugal savings of a faithful memory which is shared in common, in a very marvellous fashion by the most extraordinary and inseparable pair of men that we ever experienced, namely, Barry & Patten, the renowned Saloon-keepers of San Francisco. Rather might we say that these old associates (whose names are as inseparable as Beaumont and Fletcher or Day & Martin,) have kept, with a surprising unintermission and unerring precision, a mental rag bag of passing events, little and big, as they have taken place in San Francisco since the early part of the year 1850 and are now overhauling its hoardings. Their book is not by any means of the character of that dreary thing called a Diary; nor yet is it a scrap book; nor, as they express a hope of escaping, "Kimball's Directory for 1850;" but, rather, as we say, a rag bag of useful scraps cut off and laid away to be overhauled and made use of when the cloth they were clipped from is grown old and forgotten, and past service. We shall, indeed, not be misunderstood if we change the figure and say that this is a surprising instance of keeping the cases on a series of old games whose dealers even, the most of them, are dead and gone, this ever so long. This firm of Barry & Patten is as much an institution in San Francisco as Telegraph Hill, Meigs' Wharf or Emperor Norton. Their place of business, their bar room, and the atmosphere, associations and memories of it, are as much a feature of the certain, inevitable, actual and essential San Francisco life as the Mermaid Inn in old, and Almack's in modern, London, was and is. And not the least remarkable feature of their bar is themselves. They stepped ashore at San Francisco from the steam propeller Columbus on the 6th of June 1850 with a certain gentlemanlike cut of "long togs" and an unmistakable Boston flavor about them, looking of a certain undefinable age; and there they are yet, as unchanged as the Sphinx! Barry's hair and Patten's beard; Barry's nose and Patten's eyes; Barry's belly and Patten's back, are each and all, and every minute thing and manner and peculiarity about them, just precisely now what they were "in the Spring of '50." They don't keep a rum shop; they take pay for presiding over the tipping of gentlemen. They always remember that Bacchus was a god; and that the gods drank "nectar on high Olympus."

But we are drifting, getting garrulous over our tittle, and neglecting the previous question. This book does for you what you do for yourself when you sit down and discuss, across your crackers and cheese and ale, with your fellow Pioneer on the other side of the barrel-head, the mellow and sacred, old, old, ever so old and marvellous and dreamy and tender memories which loom up like a vision—almost like a vagary, out of the golden past which hovers over everything that went to make up the anomalies and days and nights of romance in the early and half unearthly life of California. It is for this reminding and not for any intrinsic literary merits which this book possesses that it is to be prized. Still there is some very excellent descriptive writing between its covers—especially well told being the pathetic story of Old H—n., in Chapter Five. It is the feeling which pervades the book that will find interest and sympathy amongst the old timers;—and even its odd smacks of scholarship, albeit the least bit pedantic, is flavoured as like old cheese and wine, for it is characteristic of the place from whence it is exhaled. A slip of paper in the book itself apprises us that John G. Fox has it for sale.

SEMLINS asks if your wife were sick, and needed physic, what sort of criminal would you go for? All done? You'd go for a pilferer, of course.—Endowment.

Not much we wouldn't. We'd take an account of stock, and if the symptoms continued, go for the nurse!

The great Persian potentate who is now in London expresses his regrets that he cannot visit Uncle Sam, and sends his regards to President Grant. Oh Shah!

We have heretofore, in a mild and modest sort of fashion ventured to indulge in an occasional criticism upon the boastings of the Minnesota editors regarding the climate of their State. We have protested, meekly, against its frigidity of temperature in the mid winter months, and had been snubbed therefor; we have with moderation of statement objected to the violence and frequency of its thunder storms in Summer and been derided for our opinions and called coward because of their expression; but let the reader peruse and ponder upon the following, which is from the Glenwood (Minn.) Eagle and judge if we are not therein somewhat justified:

One of the most remarkable cases of the freaks of lightning comes to us this week from White Bear Center. Our home readers will remember the very curious and severe thunder storm which suddenly burst upon us last Thursday evening. Well, Mr. Thron O. Lee, of the said town, was driving home his cattle, walking the while, and his son was riding in the wagon. A very sharp crash of thunder and lightning darted down, striking, as the boy says, his father, whom he saw immediately and completely enveloped in flames. In proof of this, we might add, that Mr. Lee's clothes were entirely consumed, even to his shoes, and his jack-knife was without a handle; his body having been left crisped, so much so indeed as to be wholly unrecognizable by his friends. He was taken from the roadside, where he fell, and buried the next morning. The deceased leaves a wife and five children. This we consider one of the most remarkable cases on record.

HERR HENRI WIENIAWSKI the celebrated violinist made his debut before a San Francisco audience one night last week. This performer ranks second to Ole Bull, (nobody can be Ole Bull's equal, take him for all in all) and his playing created almost a furore amongst his hearers. The Alta's musical critic has this to say about the Herr's fiddle itself:

A few words of the violin used by Herr Wieniawski may not be out of place. It is one of the celebrated Stradivarius Cremona make, of the year 1719, and was presented to Herr Wieniawski by the citizens of St. Petersburg, Russia, on the 31st of March, 1864, as a token of esteem and regard.

R. J. MOODY, a light weight capitalist, from Shelburn, is on a visit to Zion. He reads the New Endowment regularly, in Shelburn, and says his copy of the paper has an extensive circulation—all the bloated bondholders in the range read it. But, as we are about to state—He saw the circus advertisement, and endeavored to get here in time for it, but was detained by meeting a bound down train and took in Corinne and the salt marsh and Bear Creek—and found the boat isn't running.—New Endowment.

Why is a Circus bill like Bob Moody? Give it up? Because it is an immense and attractive placard. (Don't spoil this by pronouncing it "play-card.")

THE editor of the Glenwood Eagle perpetrates an oleaginous joke by nominating Frank Daggett for Governor. In the matter of brains, Frank would average well with those nominated thus far, while in point of bowels he hasn't an equal in the west.—Minneapolis Tribune.

This bowelry development seems to be peculiar to the Daggett family. The seer of the Enterprise is constructed upon the pregnant principle, and the whole world knows that his name is Daggett.

CHARLES O'CONOR is young Walworth's lawyer.

SOME fifty horses were burned to death in a stable at Buffalo on Monday morning.

RECORDER John Hackett of New York City has deferred sentencing Sharkey, convicted of murder, until next Saturday so as to give him a chance to make a motion for a new trial.

VALUABLE THOTTIES BURNED.—Says a dispatch:

Philadelphia, June 23.—The trotting horses burned in Turner's stable, near Point Breeze Park this morning, were Dol, Daisy, Jernon, Lady Girard, Sife and Brutus. The total loss by the fire is $50,000.

DREADFUL.—One of yesterday's telegrams says:

PORTLAND, (Me.) June 23.—B. F. Roberts' house, with out-buildings, near Sacarappa, were burned this morning. Mrs. Roberts leaped from the second-story window and was killed. Mrs. Boody, niece of Roberts, who also leaped from the same window, escaped injury by the fall, but is thought to be fatally burned. The little son of Roberts was also seriously injured by a fall down stairs. The fire is thought to be the work of an incendiary.

THE New York police have scared the faro dealers into shutting up their establishments.

THE recent horrible tragedy in Maine is the subject of the following dispatch:

BELFAST, Me., June 29.
The Coroner's jury in the Gordon tragedy completed the inquest this afternoon and find that the father and mother came to their death in consequence of blows inflicted upon their heads with an ax fracturing their skulls; that the infant was either killed in a like manner or died from inhaling smoke or fire after the blows were given; that the fire was kindled in many places in and upon the bed and crib in which the little boy was sleeping, and that the door leading to the room was closed. The jurors further say that the blows were inflicted by John T. Gordon with malice aforethought, and that the fire was kindled and the door shut by him for the purpose of causing the bodies of the victims to be consumed and destroyed.

ONE of the latest arrests in San Francisco is that of a ship captain who had on board of his vessel a consumptive sailor whom he used to sling over the side of the ship and "tow" him for punishment—his sickness being his offense. The crew of the ship swear that this captain did these cruel things.

THEY are going to have some rarely good horn blowing in New York. The band of the 108th Regiment of Saxony has just got there and will give some concerts.

THE cholera is in Wheeling, Va., very mild there, so far.
